Rosie was married to my uncle, Harold. They visited often in later years. She always worked out in our garden and helped Mother in the house. They got a long very well. It was always fun to have her and Uncle Harold around. My son, for some reason, always called her Uncle Rosie. I should have kept in closer touch with her. Many things happened in the few years before her death, and I am just now finding out she passed away. In Loving Memory, Carol Shull
